

Ethnobotany Research and Applications* Authors Instructions

Publication in Ethnobotany Research and Applications is open to anyone. When a paper has two or more authors, the author submitting the manuscript is expected to be the primary author. A cover letter accompanying an electronic manuscript submission should state which author is responsible for revision and for reading digital proofs and that the manuscript is not under consideration by any other publication. Please also include all required data from the submission form including the number of text pages, the number of tables, figures, and appendices.

Ethnobotany Research and Applications publishes peer-reviewed scientific articles on interactions between people and plants. Primarily agronomic or horticultural papers and those concerned mainly with checklists of useful plants, or analytical data on the chemical constituents of plants should be submitted elsewhere.

Articles are considered in the following categories as long as the focus is upon ethnobotany:

- ▶ Research (applied or theoretical)
- ▶ Applications (case studies, implementation of ethnobotanical knowledge)
- ▶ Essays and perspective editorials
- ▶ Photo essays
- ▶ Methodology reviews
- ▶ Theoretical discussions

Please follow these instructions when submitting a manuscript for review:

Format: The manuscript should be submitted as a Word (.doc) or Word Perfect (.wpd) file using 8.5 inch x 11 inch paper size with 1 inch margins and single spacing throughout the document.

Font: Any modern font may be used but articles will be formatted in Ariel for publication.

Length: Manuscripts of any length will be considered. Longer manuscripts may require more time for review and editing. Concise documents, using references to summarize lengthy discussions are highly recommended.

Style: The Council of Biological Editors Style Manual 5th Edition is the primary reference used in setting the standards for the preparation of the manuscripts. The format style of manuscripts (especially Literature Cited entries), further, must conform to the practices followed in the most recent online publication of Ethnobotany Research and Applications. The Chicago Manual of Style, 14th Edition, may be consulted for additional guidance.

Numbers: In the text, spell out one-digit numbers unless they are used with units of measure (four oranges, 4 cm) and use numerals for larger numbers. Do not begin sentences with an abbreviation or numeral. Do not use footnotes except for title and within tables.

Abstract: An abstract must be submitted. The abstract should not exceed 150 words, it can be authored in any language with English being preferred. Additional translations of the abstract may also be included.

All manuscripts are requested to be submitted electronically using the Online Manuscript Submission System. This system is intended to be user friendly, as a streamlined approach to submitting manuscripts electronically. It permits a subsequent process of peer-review process that is usually rapid.

The Online Manuscript Submission system involves a 7 step process, including the following elements;

- 1) Filling out and submitting a Publication Agreement form.
- 2) Filling out and submitting a Conflict of Interest statement.
- 3) Filling out and submitting an Ethics statement.
- 4) Considering making a pledge or donation to the journal.
- 5) Filling out and submitting a Manuscript Profile (including Primary Author Contact, Title, Abstract, Cover letter, Suggested Reviewers).
- 6) Uploading of all text and supporting images and illustrations files.

For more information concerning Directions for Electronic Submission consult the online Help at www.ethnobotanyjournal/manuscript_submission/directions.html